INTERNATIONAL SYMPOSIUM ON ROMANTIC IRONY

The Department of Comparative Literature, in collaboration with the International Comparative Literature Association (ICLA), will host the "International Symposium on Romantic Irony" on 7 and 8 April. The Symposium is made possible by grants from the University, the Alma Mater Fund, the ICLA, and Canada Council. As a symposium, it is the first of its kind to take place in Canada, as well as the first to be sponsored by the Department.

Why "Romantic Irony"? It has been recognized as a central phenomenon of German Romanticism and is one of the pervasive influences of modern Western literature. However, although it has been studied in great detail in Germanic literature, and to a lesser degree in French and English works, in most other European languages the subject has either been investigated only partially or not at all. It is the object of the Symposium to explore the validity of the concept of Romantic Irony in some of the less well-known literatures, and to approach it from a different point of view in such Romantic movements as the German, French, English, and American.

The Symposium is of great significance to the International Comparative Literature Association which is preparing a huge series, Comparative History of Literatures in European Languages. "Romantic Irony," the first volume of its sub-series "Romanticism," should leave the "drawing board stage" in a few months—particularly as a result of this Symposium. In fact, besides allowing the presentation of papers on specific topics and a round-table discussion on the present state of research on Romantic Irony, the meetings will permit consultations among the official participants and other Canadian scholars about individual and collective Canadian collaboration in all volumes of the major series. Canadian scholars are already participating in the preparation of many volumes on particular literary movements—for example, those on the Renaissance literatures—and, therefore, one major intention of the Symposium is to extend this participation to the volumes on Romanticism and simultaneously to intensify Canadian collaboration in other projects.

Pictured above is the University of Alberta Concert Choir performing at St. Mary's Church in Königstein, Germany, in May of 1977. This performance was part of the Choir's first European tour. Their reception was uniformly positive, and the reviews they received were impressive. On 7 April at 8 p.m. they will be performing for a local audience at Convocation Hall. The University of Alberta Concert Choir is a ninety-member choir of the Department of Music; the touring Concert Choir has forty-five members selected from the larger ensemble. The only prerequisites for membership are musical ability, interest, and enthusiasm. Their repertoire is varied, but one of their specialties is the music of Canadian composers. Part of their program on 7 April will be the premiere performance of Gerhard Krapf's "Three Bits." Larry Cook, Chairman of the Division of Choral Music at the University, is the conductor of the Choir. Admission to the 7 April concert is $2 regular and $1 for students. For further information, telephone 432-3263.

The Comparative History, undertaken some ten years ago, is the main research activity of the ICLA and it is of some importance to note that the University's Department of Comparative Literature is of such high calibre that it has been allowed to host the Symposium, and to serve as the centre for the coordination of the Romanticism series of the Comparative History. Milan V. Dimic, Professor of Comparative Literature, is an officer of the ICLA committee publishing this series.

The Symposium is open to scholars and graduate students. The registration fee is $20 for professors and $10 for accompanying persons and students. The fee entitles each participant to attend and participate in question and discussion periods after papers are delivered, and to free coffee and lunch on both days of the meetings. A registration and information desk will be open from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. on 6 April and from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. on 7 and 8 April in room 230 of the Arts Building. The schedule of the Symposium follows. All meetings will take place in the Senate Chamber, Arts Building.

STUDIO THEATRE STAGES LEE AWARD WINNING PLAY

From 6 to 16 April, the Clifford E. Lee Award winning play The Running of the Deer by Geoffrey Ursell will be staged by the University's Studio Theatre. The three previous Lee Award plays were Tom Grainger's The Injured, Kenneth Dyba's Power in the Blood, and Lezley Havard's Jill, and if they are any indication of the quality recognized by the Lee Award, then The Running of the Deer will reward close attention. However, even before the production's first performance, a good deal of significant activity has already taken place.

To a certain extent any award is a guarantee of a certain level of competence. The Lee Award, however, is especially significant in that it operates under a unique sponsorship program which precludes the possibility of the Award being given to a play for any reason other than its excellence. Knowledgeable people sponsor those plays they think are worthy, and neither the name of the playwright, sponsor, nor the geographical origin of the play is known to the judges. This system protects the established playwright, for if he fails to win the award, there is no stigma attached to his failure because only his sponsor is aware of his entry. The system also protects the unknown playwright for judges will not be swayed by a well-known name.

The award to the playwright is $3,000, in-residence expenses to cover the rehearsal time, and a two week residency at the University of Alberta Drama Department. The residency at the Drama Department is, in many ways, one of the more significant aspects of the Award. In October of last year the play was given a workshop at the Department of Drama. The purpose of a workshop is to allow the play to be read and commented on by professional actors, thus enabling the dramatist to uncover problems in the text. At the end of the two week period the play was given a public reading which further enabled the playwright

CHEDDI JAGAN TO SPEAK ON CAMPUS

At 3 p.m. in 1-91 Tory Building, he will address a combined Anthropology, Political Science, and History Seminar on "The political economy of Latin America." Dr. Jagan's final address will be to a Students' Union meeting in TL-11 Tory Building. His topic will be "Contemporary problems in Third World countries."

to perceive problems that were not obvious on the page. As a result of this process, Mr. Ursell was able to refine his play even before it went into rehearsal. The contribution of time, space, and informed comment is a good example of how an academic institution may help the creative process rather than hindering it as popular opinion too often suggests.

The Running of the Deer takes its momentum from events in Newfoundland in the year 1768. Focusing on the divergent interests of the colonists, the British governors, and the Beothuk Indians, the historical aspects of the play have been scrupulously researched. Of course divergent interests are not confined to the past, and Mr. Ursell's examination of the situation should provide some insight into contemporary Canadian situations.

Howard Dallin, director of the play, has for the past three years been the artistic director of Persephone Theatre in Saskatoon. Edmonton audiences will know Mr. Dallin from his performance in Theatre Three's Play Strindberg and his direction of A Taste of Honey. Mr. Dallin has said of the play that it is one of the strongest selections made by the Lee Award since its inception. The cast includes David Fox, Jeremy Hart, Peter MacNeill, Bill Meilen, Alan Stebbings, Rick Stojan, Pamela Boyd, Michael Hodgson, Manus Sasonkin, Pat Smy, David Sereda, Tony Bell, and Douglas Newell.

Admission to The Running of the Deer is $4 regular and $3 for students and subscribers. All performances are at Corbett Hall. Tickets and further information are available from 3-146 Fine Arts Centre, telephone 432-2495.
